Supporting Pollinators

One third of our wild bees are threatened with extinction on the island of Ireland because their food sources are under threat. Pollinators need more areas of native flower-rich grassland – no matter how small – to find enough food.

Here's how you can help to support pollinators in your community:

1. Let it grow:

Only mow your lawn once a month to allow native wildflowers to grow.

2. Create wildflower corridors:

Dedicating a patch of grass or creating a corridor of wildflowers can be hugely beneficial to pollinators.

3. Use your space:

No garden - no problem!
You can still help to support pollinators by planting a pollinator-friendly pot or window box. Plants like thyme, chives, oregano and lavender are all excellent sources of pollen and nectar that bees love to munch on!

A BETTER TOMORROW
